Bio

Suzannah Morrison is a Sustainability Leader with a background in the creative industries: film/television, events/arts management, and sponsorship management.

2025

Sustainability Coordinator, Granite, mini series for Apple TV, filmed almost exclusively on locations across regional Victoria. The production was recognised by visiting Apple TV Executives as being “The most sustainable production they had seen in terms of crew buy-in and sustainable practices”.

Morrison began sustainable facilities management on major infrastructure project sites in Victoria, Australia as a leader of behavioural change. Morrison manages data capture and reporting for Energy, Waste and Water in a format easily available for external audits.

This passion and experience was recognised in 2023 when she was awarded the VWMA Award for Female Leadership in Waste Management and Recycling.

With a reputation for leadership in waste diversion, Morrison was headhunted by the M80RR Project to join the Sustainability Team for the $3.6 billion North East Link project in Melbourne's north. Her reputation for delivering results, implementing initiatives to avoid waste, and promoting positive behavioural change preceded her.

Her presence on the project has seen all of her initiatives adopted to date, including diverting waste from landfill utilising IOT Method Recycling bins in lunchrooms to capture real-time data.

Morrison presented “A Recipe for Recycling Success” at the 2024 Waste Expo Australia, Melbourne Convention Centre. Featured article in wastemanagementreview.com.au.
